

BYO CONTAINERS PROGRAM

The City supports BYO Containers program which aims to connect local food outlets to environmentally conscious consumers, and help reduce single use plastics by normalising the use of reusable containers for takeaway food, butchers and delicatessens.

The City of Bunbury invites you to be part of the BYO Containers program.

This growing movement Australia wide allows food outlets to reach environmentally conscious consumers and help reduce the waste generated by takeaway and food purchases.

How it works

Participating food outlets are happy to use customers clean, reusable containers for takeaway food and may even offer a discount. We will encourage the community to support these businesses, that are striving for a low waste community. The City of Bunbury will fund establishment fees of this initiative as part of our commitment to providing sustainability. There is no additional cost for business owners and if you already offer an incentive to customers you are still welcome to join us. Participating food outlets will receive customised posters and window stickers to display at their premises. We encourage participating businesses' to promote this through their own media, such as websites and Facebook/Instagram pages. The City of Bunbury will offer the first 25 businesses that register 20 free stainless steel containers. The City will also help promote the program through various forms of print and digital media.
